SUPREME COURT

Confidence of Justices Badly Shaken by Revelations of Attorney.

Washington, October 24 .- Four hundred and forty-three cans of frozen eggs of the vintage of 1910 occupied the attention to-day of the Supreme Court of the United States. The members of that tribunal were engaged in considering whether the eggs were decomposed.

Ralph S. Rounds, attorney for the claimant of the eggs, argued that the eggs were "not decomposed" within the meaning of the pure food law, and told the court that the case was the BURK & COMPANY, cases which had come before it for consideration, because it would decide whether the pure food law was to be interpreted according to the view of the "young men in the Department of Agriculture, or according to common sense." He said that the common sense way of interpreting the law was to give the word "decomiposed" the meaning of "unwholesomely decomposed" and not make the decomposition depend upon the number of baccilli that could be counted in an ess.

an egg.

Members of the court manifested an interest in the rudimentary facts about eggs in addition to the questions

Mr. Rounds informed the court that there were four grales of eggs—"cur-rent use," "seconds," "chicks" and "spots."

STATE FIGHTS ORDER

Court Acts on Demurrer of Modern Workmans of World.

An order was entered in the City Circuit Court in vacation by Judge R. Carter Scott yeterday in the case of the Commonwealth of Virginia, at the relation of Joseph Button. Commissioner of Insurance, against the Modern Workmen of the World, filing the demurrer was theseupon argued by counsel, and the court overruled the demurrer as to clauses one and two of the petition. And sustained it as to section three of the State's petition. The defendant was given thirty days in which to file an answer to paragraphs one and two. These two paragraphs of the State's original petition set forth that the Modern Workmen of the World is a fraternal insurance company, organized under the laws of the State of Virginia, and that on January 25, 1911. By contract of reinsurance or otherwise, it transferred its entire property and business to the Royal Life Insurance Company of the Distrite of Columbia, without first having obtained the written consent of Joseph Button, Commissioner of Insurance of Virginia.

Paragraph three, against which the demurrer was sustained, set forth the State's contention that the further transaction of business by the Modern Workman of the World would be hazardous to its certificate holders, its creditors and the public.

Chicago, October 24.—It was supposed that Joseph Waitkus had committed suicide when his body was found in a South Side rooming house to-day. A revolver, said by his landlady to have belonged to Waitkus, was found beside the body.

An inquest was being held here this afternoon, when Mrs. Anna Rober rushed into the room and shouted: "Stop, stop; he did not kill himself; he was murdered; there stands the man who killed him."

The man indicated was Joseph Brudas, husband of the woman from whom Waitkus rented his room. The intry was fust about to return a verdict of suicide Mrs. Rober declared the revolver found beside the dead man had been purchased by Brudas.

Brudas was held by ogder of the coroner.

Mabry said he was a millwright and saw-filer and had worked at his trade in mills all over the South. He has been a detective several months. He joined the Brotherhood of Timber Workers at Deridder, La., in July, 1911. In May, 1912, Mabry said, he attended a timber workers' convention in Alexandria and served as inner guard. The proceedings were secret. William D. Haywood and Covington Hall attended as representatives of the Industrial Workers of the World.

Emerson and Lehmann, two of the defendants, were there. Mabry declared the speakers advised tampering with machines, loosing bolts, carrying off num, cutting belts, sawing logs short, driving spikes in them and dropping mercury dust in the bearings; in general, putting the machinery in
